

April 6, 2006

The idea that the largest importer of cheap Chinese-labor third-rate merchandise -- who also originally had the gall to lie and claim their crap was "made in the USA" -- should also now be allowed to control the terms of our economy via the banks is a bad idea right down there on par with putting Neil Bush in charge of regulating Savings & Loans.

The Chinese already own more than half of the USA's record debt, thanks to George Bush and his laundered illegal campaign contributions. Allowing China-Mart to own the banks as well -- Communist China will have taken over the USA without firing a shot.

By the way, a friend of mine works the night shift cleaning up after terminal patients in a charity hospital. She says she prefers that job to the one she describes as the lowest point in her life: as a greeter for the Wall family's billion-dollar shit-peddling empire.

D. H. Strong